Washington, DC -- July 18, 2011

Transparency International USA is pleased to announce the selection of Claudia J. Dumas as its next President and CEO as of September 1, 2011.

"The Board of Directors is very pleased that Claudia Dumas will lead TI-USA forward on its important work" said Chair Alan Larson. Ms. Dumas brings more than 25 years of public, private and not-for-profit experience in anti-corruption, rule of law and commercial and international finance law. She was a Senior Advisor to the U.S. Agency for International Development promoting rule of law reforms and, most recently, served as the first Executive Director of the World Justice Project. From 1984 to 1998, Ms Dumas held positions with the law firm of Shearman & Sterling, IBM Corporation and Citibank.

Ms. Dumas said of her selection, "I am pleased and honored to be joining Transparency International-USA. This is a critical time in the fight against corruption and I am looking forward to helping TI-USA and its partners move the agenda forward. "

Larson said that "the Board and I want to express our deepest appreciation for the tremendous leadership Nancy Boswell has provided in building this organization and promoting the anticorruption agenda since 1994." Boswell said, "I want to extend a warm welcome to Claudia, who brings a wealth of experience to TI-USA. It has been a privilege to work with so many highly committed individuals within TI-USA, the TI movement and across the anti-corruption community, and I look forward to continued engagement in meeting the challenges ahead."
